Flipping the Script: How Narrative Acts of Resistance During the Holocaust Can Teach Us to Tell Our Own True Stories

An Interdisciplinary Inquiry on Teaching the Holocaust

Tempe, Arizona

June 15 – 19, 2020

The seminar is facilitated by Tricia Parker, who teaches English language learners at Thunderbird High School in Phoenix, AZ, and Ashley Yap, who teaches English Language Arts at Chandler High School in Chandler, AZ.

This five-day professional development seminar offers educators opportunities to enrich their knowledge of Holocaust history and application of those lessons to social justice issues in our present communities, particularly our state.

Participants will explore how resisters and activists used stories as acts of resistance against propaganda during the Holocaust and how teachers and students can use stories as acts of resistance against false or misleading narratives about themselves and their communities. Seminar highlights include:

- Arizona State Library, Archives, & Public Records research
- United States Holocaust Memorial Museum's History Unfolded Project
- Off-site excursions and writing marathon
- Guest scholars and survivor testimony
- Who Will Write Our History film viewing and discussion
- Jewish culture and life in Arizona

This seminar is offered FREE to educators thanks to the generous support of TOLI and our partners. Participants receive:

- Books and materials
- Daily breakfast and a farewell dinner
- 40 professional development hours
